

CARNIVAL.

BAL MASQUE OF JUNGER MANNERCHOR.

Brilliant Fete Dancante at the Academy Last Night - Curious Ceremonials, Tricks and Acts, Etc., Etc.

The grand ball of the Young Mannerchor Society is always looked forward to with delight both by German fellow-citizens and many American families. In many respects the ball given last night eclipsed all others given by this association.

Going to the Ball. From seven o'clock until ten a steady stream of masqueraders poured into the Academy, and the bustle and laughter of the crowd was truly exhilarating, and death to the worst species of blue devils.

The Entrance. The doors were in charge of a Special Committee, who provided an ample police force to maintain the most perfect order.

The Interior. The dressing and coat rooms were in charge of careful and competent persons, and there was no rush or confusion to mar the pleasures of the evening.

There was no attempt made by the masqueraders to adorn the Academy. The usual parquette floor was laid so as to form an extension to the stage. Up to half-past 8 o'clock the parquette circle and balcony were crowded with masqueraders, dressed in varied and magnificent costumes, and the light from the curtain was one of real grandeur and beauty.

The Entrance and Ovation to the Prince Carnival. Shortly after 9 o'clock the curtain was raised, and the procession of the Prince Carnival was seen.

It was the most grotesque and bizarre of the period. A file of caricatured policemen led the van, followed by the "Alphabetic Band," composed of twenty-seven persons, each bearing a placard fore and aft, upon which was painted a large alphabetical character, and one with a mark of exclamation (!).

Succeeding these came a guard of honor, and a full brass band playing the grand march from "Un Botta in Maschera." In the rear of these was the beautiful car of the carnival, painted blue, and covered with stars and drapery of red, white, and blue colors.

The Prince and Princess, arrayed in appropriate costumes. The chariot was drawn by two man-of-war boats, who (with?) were driven by a very pranky fellow dressed as an ape. The car was flanked by many beautiful young ladies, attired as maids of honor, and knights mounted upon (papier) emulated steeds.

Following the train of the Prince's chariot came an army of masqueraders, in every conceivable costume. There were knights, fiends, nuns, kings, dukes, princes, clowns, harlequins, columbins, monkeys, dogs, pigs, toads, cows, lambs, ducks, and "little dears" in endless variety.

After marching around the stage several times the procession halted, and the Prince and Princess were introduced to the immense audience. The welcome was extended in a neat speech from the Master of Ceremonies, and politely and graciously acknowledged by the Prince.

After this the A. B. C. boys performed some novel feats. At the word of command they appeared upon their breast-plated words, "WELCOME TO THE BALL OF THE JUNGER MANNERCHOR." This novelty was loudly cheered by the brilliant audience, and the ball began.

The most amusing and interesting feature of the evening was the appearance of twelve masks, each representing a letter, and the whole forming the legend "Mannerchor." The gentlemen composing this group were all members of the "Old Mannerchor." They wore high peaked hats, bearing the words "January 24th" thereon, on which were written the names of the Mannerchor.

They, through combination of the letters, formed all sorts of words, which produced great applause, and was really something new and interesting.

The Music was furnished by two bands, and it was through-out admirable. The promenade band, led by Professor Theo. Herman, played nineteen sets marches, and the string orchestra executed seventeen popular dances, under the direction of Professors Mark and Simon Hassler. The selections were as follows:

1. Young Mannerchor's Bal Masque March. 2. Muller. 3. Walz. 4. Getteschwinning. 5. Lanner. 6. Promenade Music. 7. Schottische. 8. Lancers. 9. Klack-erbocker. 10. Promenade Music. 11. Walz. 12. Die Gemahlliche. 13. Promenade Music. 14. Quastille. 15. Walz. 16. Promenade Music. 17. Lancers. 18. Promenade Music. 19. Polka. 20. Polka. 21. Promenade Music. 22. Polka. 23. Promenade Music. 24. Polka. 25. Promenade Music. 26. Polka. 27. Promenade Music. 28. Schottische. 29. Klack-erbocker.

Those who were present last evening will bear us out in the assertion that the patrons of the Young Mannerchor ball were most select, and the dresses unusually rich and varied.

A Poetical Effusion. A young lady who persisted in waltzing most vigorously with a young physician of this city, fell into a swoon as soon as the music ceased, and was conveyed to a private room, where she soon revived, and was on the floor in time for the "tet-ete-tet" dances. This young lady afterwards dropped a glove, which our Journalist Carnival reporter picked up and returned to her. In receiving it, she let fall a piece of tinted and perturbed paper, upon which was written these lines:

THE BAL MASQUE. Through the long windings of the graceful dance Its figures set, cross purposed as it were, Creators of aurore light and Orient air, Whom pleasing glances coolly enlivenance, Some clad like "sonnet lassies, fresh frae France," Pump, rosy in their charms, and debonnaire, Sheddin' a radiance from their yellow hair. Moving in trixy shapes in light advance, Some sparkling, black-eyed Andalusian came, Eyes flashing love from out each fringed lid, Others, where 'mid cunningly lies hid, Only to give forth shafts of amorous fire, Appared in all garbs that earth hath seen— Crown as of old Ierpsichore their queen.

The Managers were all urbane and excellent fellows, who deserve to be mentioned here for gallantry's sake.

Committee of Arrangements.—Louis B. Grim, Charles A. Meurer, and Christian Mann. Floor Managers.—K. Schwicardi, B. E. Schada, H. Runkel, Joseph Lengert, E. Stephan, and J. Schnell.

Special Manager.—Mr. Thomas E. Harkins, who was of great assistance to the reporters, was constantly on the qui vive.

The Supper was first-rate. It was furnished in excellent style by Messrs. Conley, Hunter & Honck, who are already known as famous caterers for balls and parties.

The appearance of an Irishman as "King Gambrinus," and a Teuton as "Brian Borohime," arm-in-arm, created considerable merriment about midnight.

The following despatches were received by the managers of the Grand Consolidated (very limited) Grape-vine and Clothes lines:— WASHINGTON, January 23.—Your ball is vetoed. I cannot swing around with you. Whisky received. A. J. FARR, January 23.—L'Empire, o'cet pas. RAYBORN.

OSBORNE PALACE, January 23.—Cannot attend

THE PRINCES OF WALES

because the Princess of Wales is— and the Princess Helena is also— VIC. ROEMER. New York, January 23.—Morrisey's deal. Will be done by the 4-11-44 train. BUS WOULD.

Chicago, January 23.—I drew the elephant from Von H. Crosby. Is a fine animal, but I can't move it to my farm, hence I can't bring it to the ball. I'll sell it cheap. No. 58,800.

Marriage of the "Aztec Children." The human monstrosities known here some years ago as the "Aztec Children," have recently been exhibited in England. The London papers report that they were married in that city on the 7th instant. The London Herald says:—

"The bride was dressed in a Russian costume, presented to her by the Governor-General of Moscow; and the couple proceeded, with Mr. J. M. Morris, their guardian, to the office of the Registrar of St. George's, Hanover Square, where, in the presence of the Registrar-General, who had issued the license after due inquiry whether there was any bar to the union, the couple were made one by civil contract. They were returned to their lodgings, where the civil was attired in a white satin dress, with a lace veil, an orange-blossom wreath, all, as well as the jewelry which she wore, being made for the occasion by Messrs. Howell & James, of Regent Street, and the bridegroom wore a well-fitting suit of evening dress, with a camelia in one button-hole and the ribbon of some continental order, whereof he is a member, in the other.

"Soon after 1 o'clock they were taken to Willis' Rooms, where they were attended in the capacity of bridesmaids by the young persons who usually see to their wants, and where they were received by a numerous company, among whom were Lord William Lennox and Dr. Brewer, the medical candidate for Colchester, who has taken an active part in forwarding this marriage, on the ground that it will be for the happiness and welfare of the pair, who are decidedly much attached to each other. The girl, who carried a white bouquet, conducted herself as modestly, and notwithstanding her olive skin, as becomingly as any other bride; and, as for the 'happy man,' he was simply at his wife's end with exultation. Mr. Morris took the head of the table, having on his right the young couple, and on his left Dr. Brewer and Lord William Lennox.

"After a sumptuous dinner, served in Messrs. Willis' best style, the toasts of 'The Queen,' 'The Prince and Princess of Wales,' and 'President Johnson' were given, followed by that of 'Health and Happiness to the Bride and Bridegroom,' which was heartily received. Mr. Morris returned thanks on their behalf; and Signor Maximo Nunez, which is the name the bridegroom bears, in his gentle way expressed his thanks in pantomime. The health of Mr. Morris, and one or two other toasts, followed; after which the company adjourned to another apartment, where they had the satisfaction of seeing the couple under less restraint of etiquette than before, and where both created a very favorable impression by their general amiability and obvious mutual affection."

Wedlock in Memphis. The number of marriage certificates issued in Memphis in 1866 was 1077, and the number of those returned 999. The war, considering the situation and experience of Memphis, had a less discouraging effect on matrimony than might be supposed. The number of marriages in 1861, indicated by the number of returned certificates, were 312, and during all the troubles were at no time less, except in 1861, when they fell to 264. In 1862 (we quote from a Memphis contemporary) an increase was noticeable, which might have been a surmounting dejeuner, served in Messrs. Willis' best style, the toasts of 'The Queen,' 'The Prince and Princess of Wales,' and 'President Johnson' were given, followed by that of 'Health and Happiness to the Bride and Bridegroom,' which was heartily received.
